JONES SEEKS BIG BOOST IN FARM OUTPUT

Wants 16 Million More Acres Under Cultivation Next Year.

STRESSES MEAT, EGGS

68 Million Acres of Wheat Sought In Total of 380,000,000.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — War Food Administrator Marvin Jones today announced a 1944 farm program calling for an increase of 16,000,000 acres in crops and emphasizing meat, egg and dairy production.

Jones' goal of 380,000,000 acres for next year will be the largest ever put to crops by American farmers, exceeding the previous peak of 362,000,000 acres in 1942.

Jones appealed to farmers to put "every crop acre and every farming facility" to the most productive use, but warned against plowing up land which should be kept in grass. He indicated that it would not be necessary to repeat the errors of World war I days when vast acres of the great plains were plowed up only to become "dust bowls" in the next decade.

A special goal of 68,000,000 acres of wheat was announced, 14,000,000 acres more than this year. Other crop goals will be announced later. Most of the wheat increase requested is in the great plains states, but Jones added:

"Our planted acreage of food crops can be expanded without plowing up land which should be kept in grass if we use the crop land which has been idle during recent years and if we speed up the cycle of crop rotation of some farms.

"The program recognizes that demands for feed will be imperative for several years and that sound practices must be followed to insure highest possible yields over a period of years."

The war food administration will continue its program of support prices, Jones said, "to establish desirable price relationships at levels designed to bring the needed volume of production."

The increase in wheat acreage —which with favorable weather could produce more bushels than the 1942 bumper crop year—was seen as a plan to prepare for feeding occupied Europe.

Jones said farmers would be asked to increase their acreage of such crops as dry beans and peas, soy beans, potatoes, and peanuts to meet the swiftly-changing pattern of wartime consumption.

The program also will include measures to assist farmers in

ENGINEERS DUE ON PORT TODAY

CAA Representatives To Study Sites For Airport Expansion, Formally Present Plan.

Engineers of the Civil Aeronautics Administration were scheduled to arrive in Mansfield today to formally present the government's proposal to spend $600,000 here for expansion of municipal airport facilities.

They will also survey probable sites to determine the amount of land the city will have to acquire to provide nearly mile-long hard surfaced runways which are included in the projected expansion program.

At Columbus this morning, attaches at the district CAA office said engineers were on their way to Mansfield. Mayor W. L. Locke said last week that they would be here Wednesday for a meeting with city officials.

The CAA, with approval of the war department, plans to construct a Class 4 port—a field capable of handling large passenger

CHECK BRIDGE

State Engineers To Determine Damage From Train Wreck.

Engineers of the state highway department today were scheduled to make a thorough inspection of the Park avenue west railroad viaduct damaged yesterday when five cars of an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio work train were derailed and piled into the structure.

The bridge remained open to traffic and Vance Grimes, division highway engineer at Ashland, said he was satisfied as to the safeness of the structure on the basis of a preliminary survey made by maintenance men shortly after the accident.

Under supports of the overpass were damaged and the entire bridge moved when the cars piled up on the south side of the span tearing up about 100 feet of trackage.

TRAINS COLLIDE

Fireman Injured As Fast Passenger Hits Freight.

CARP, Nev. —(AP)— A fireman was injured and passengers were shaken early today when the Union Pacific's streamliner City of Los Angeles and a freight train collided on a curve here, railroad officials announced.

A Union Pacific spokesman said the Chicago-bound streamliner, which left Los Angeles yesterday, was pulling out of Carp when the westbound freight appeared around a curve. The headon collision seriously damaged the streamliner's first power unit and the freight engine, he reported.

Crestline Boy, 9, Drowned When He Slips From Raft

CRESTLINE—Playing with a group of companions at a small lake east of Crestline yesterday, George Albert Savanovich, 9, fell into the water and drowned.

The child slipped from the raft where he was playing and disappeared into five feet of water. His playmates ran for men including his father, Albert Savanovich who searched the pool for half an hour before they recovered the body.

Artificial respiration was administered for nearly an hour by Dr. E. C. Brandt and Miss Gretchen Darlington, county health nurse, without success.

The child was born in Mansfield, May 18, 1934.

He is survived by his parents, grandfather, George Vuckovich and a brother, Milan at home.

The body was removed to the Beck funeral home but was taken to the home, 302 Washington avenue, today. Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m., Thursday at the family residence and burial will be in Greenlawn cemetery.

GUN STABILIZER HELPS WIN 'E'

Westinghouse Device Improving Tank Fire Part of Basis For Award Tomorrow.

Excellence in the production of a gun stabilizer for use in army tanks is one of the reasons why the Mansfield Westinghouse plant will receive the Army-Navy "E" award tomorrow, Col. H. M. Reedall, chief of the war department's Cleveland Ordnance district, said today.

The stabilizer is a device which a German radio broadcast discussed last week. It stated that a "special new German institute for testing captured tanks had adjudged the American 'General Sherman' tank the best the Allies have turned out."

The broadcast said the Nazis doubtless would copy its construction, particularly the gyroscopic gun mount which the Germans consider the tank's outstanding feature.

"A special innovation, which by a gyroscopic system prevents the gun from being affected by the tank when traveling on rough grounds greatly interested German experts," the broadcast stated.

Need for Recreation Center Cited by 'What to Do?' Youth

Need for a recreational center for Mansfield young people as the answer to the growing juvenile delinquency problem was emphasized today through testimony of one of seven youths who appeared before Juvenile Judge Stuart H. Cramer on charges of intoxication and disorderly conduct.

"I go to the show two or three nights a week and the rest of the time just bum around town. What else is there to do here?" the 15-year-old asked when questioned about his nightly activities.

Court attaches said the question is one which has been asked by Mansfield teen-age youngsters for some time. Judge Cramer pointed to it as "the crux of the situation."

Five of the boys brought before the court today were arrested Friday night on Orange street just off Central avenue after they had been reported for disorderly conduct in two local taverns.

They testified today that they bought and were served beer at a tavern without any questions concerning their ages. Police officers said the boys were obviously in an intoxicated condition when apprehended.

The youths, whose ages range

URGES PUBLIC REFEREE PLAN

Legislator Would give FDR, Congress Cool-Off Period.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, D., Tex., of the house judiciary committee, today proposed a plan to let "the folks back home" referee legislative bouts between the president and congress.

He suggested a constitutional amendment to provide a "cooling off" period between the time when the president vetoes a measure and congress votes on it a second time.

"This would give the people a chance to record their opinion of who is right and who is wrong in such a difference of opinion," he said."

PENSACOLA, Fla. — (INS) — Seventeen men were reported killed and several score others injured at Elgin field, army air base 65 miles east of Pensacola, in an unexplained explosion late yesterday, it was announced today by the public relations office.

Names of the victims and details of the explosions were withheld until the men's nearest of kin are notified and an investigation is completed.

SUB WAR'S NOT OVER—KNOX

Secretary Expects Attacks To Break Out Again, Silent on Paramushiru Raid Rumor.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Navy Frank Knox warned today that it would be "the worst kind of folly" to assume from recent good reports that the Atlantic submarine war is won.

"I haven't a doubt but what it will break out again," Knox said at a press conference.

"It is utterly erroneous to assume that the submarine war is over. We'll have troubles with submarines probably right up to the end of the war in greater or less degree."

"The maximum to be said with safety is that we've reduced the sinking of Allied ships materially."

Knox was questioned on rumors that the powerful Jap-

Push Toward Catania, Seal Sicily Corner

Americans Join Canadians, British to Close Arc Across Southeastern Tip Of Island; RAF Flies From England To Rip Turin on Mainland.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—The Algiers radio in a broadcast to Italy reported today that British Eighth army forces were advancing on the Catania plain. There were no details given in the broadcast but it had been announced earlier from Allied headquarters in North Africa that beach landings had been made near Catania, on Sicily's east coast some 55 miles short of Messina.

BULLETIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—Allied troops now have control of those parts of Sicily upon which supply depends, the Allied signal corps announced in a special bulletin today.

(By Associated Press)

British forces striking swiftly and audaciously up the eastern coast of Sicily have captured the port of Augusta and landed near Catania halfway up the coast, while Allied forces to the south have swept into three towns to seal off virtually the entire southeastern corner of the island, Allied announcements said today.

The succession of victories came with breathtaking swiftness.

Augusta is a port 19 miles above Syracuse, captured Saturday.

Catania is the Italian bastion midway along the coast in the Allied drive to seize all that area north to Messina and close off Sicily from the mainland. Catania lies 30 miles north of Syracuse.

In rapid-fire succession, Allied headquarters announced capture of Floridia, Palazzolo and Ragusa in an arc across the southeastern tip of Sicily in a tightening Allied noose.

American troops meanwhile were advancing in the west.

Floridia is eight miles inland from Syracuse, and Palazzolo 22 miles inland. Ragusa, a strategic rail and highway center, is 12 miles southwest of Palazzolo, and about 12 miles from the southern coast. Thus was a line drawn across the jutting corner.

The Allied communique said that bridgeheads had been extended as deep as 20 miles inland at some sectors.

With capture of Ragusa American forces on the southern shores of Sicily formed a junction with the Canadians and British.

Rome earlier acknowledged that a bridgehead had been established at Augusta. It was bombarded Monday by a strong flotilla of Allied cruisers.

American troops in the western sector, on the south shores of Sicily, continue to advance

Duce in Sicily—'In Spirit'

(By United Press)

Now Mussolini, according to radio Rome, has sent the following message to his forces in Sicily: "I am with you in spirit."

SHIFT: Nazis Throw Fullest Weight on Belgorod Wedge

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A foreign diplomatic source who usually is reliable asserted today that Adolf Hitler was reported to have assumed control of the German offensive in the Kursk bulge and broadened it into an expensive gamble for a break-through, against the advice of his generals.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—Field Marshal Guenther Von Kluge threw the entire weight of his armored columns into a furious attack today against the southern end of the 200-mile Orel-Kursk-Belgorod front in an action designed to enlarge the Belgorod wedge and blast a major breach in the Russian lines.

Dropping all efforts to break through on the northern end of the salient, Von Kluge fell back on the old Nazi power-house play, but the thick Red defenses remained impenetrable, although fighting became so violent that even tank crews of the opposing forces broke into hand-to-hand fighting on one occasion.

(A German communique claimed the Nazi armored forces with the support of the German air force had gained further ground in the area just north of Belgorod and had smashed strong enemy counter-attacks on other sectors of the front. The Russians suffered "heaviest losses" the German communique said, including a total of 400 tanks and 123 aircraft.)

GRAVEYARD: Four More Jap Ships Destroyed In Kula Gulf

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—American medium and heavy bombers carried out three more attacks on Japanese installations at Kiska, the navy announced today.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—A Japanese cruiser and three destroyers were sent to the bottom of the Kula gulf—graveyard of at least nine other enemy warships—by guns of the United States Navy in a battle which began last night.

Two other enemy destroyers probably were sunk and enemy losses may be even greater after all reports are in. The battle still was in progress, it was indicated, at the time preliminary reports were received today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Admiral William F. Halsey.

Already Japan has expended between 13 and 17 cruisers and destroyers in two battles in the central Solomons while trying to hold apart the jaws of a trap which American jungle fighters are clamping on the enemy air base of Munda.

Both battles in the Kula gulf occurred as units of the Japanese navy, moving down from the northern Solomons, encountered United States war vessels blockading New Georgia's coastline along the gulf. In the first battle July 5-6,

CHAPTER XXIII

Elder nodded after him sympathetically. "The memory'll always be with him, yes—but it'll always be with him wrong. It just goes to show what an experience of that kind can do to a man!"

"What do you mean, Dave?"

"Why, those rockets he saw at Rotterdam weren't white at all. They were red," said Captain Elder.

"If you should ask me, it's about time we saw some Russian planes," Mr. Rossi observed next morning, scanning the sky to the southward.

"If you should ask me, it's about time we delivered 'em some," said Captain Elder, indicating the Lockheeds on the decks below. "I wonder how many of the other ships. . . ."

"Submarine! Port Beam!"

Like a whale with water pouring off its back, the sub was surfacing. She was less than a mile away.

"My God!" Elder gasped. "Is he crazy? Is he trying to commit suicide? He must be English or—but no! No! He's German, all right!"

Even before the submarine's length was completely exposed, WHAM! the Merchant Mariner's four-inch gun blazed away at her. The shot fell wide. So did the next, and the next.

"Hell, what shooting!" Elder screamed, pounding the rail with his fists. "What's the matter with those fellows back there?"

WHAM! WHAM! WHAM! The shooting now, was even wilder than before.

Very calmly, men appeared on the submarine's forward deck. Her gun flashed. An instant later, the Merchant Mariner winced under a shattering explosion. The upper half of her funnel came crashing to the starboard deck, lay teetering for a moment in a cloud of soot, smoke and steam and then slid over the side with a mighty splash, taking the splintered lifeboats with it.

Elder sprang to the phone. "O'Reilly! O'Reilly! What's the matter, man? Why don't you . . ." There was another explosion aft—just where, Elder was unable to see through the smoke. The phone went dead.

"You!" he bawled to the .50 calibre crew behind the bridge, "Get busy with those machine guns! Cut loose! Let 'em have it!"

There was a series of muffled pops, as from wet firecrackers, followed by cries of pain and frenzied cursing. Then, silence.

"What happened, Parker — can you see?"

"The gun exploded, sir! All four of 'em! As soon as they squeezed the triggers they — they simply blew to hell!"

Elder hunched his shoulders, and licked his lips. "We've got to run for it! Rossi, phone the Engine Room to give her everything she's got!"

The submarine fired again. This time, the shell splashed directly in the vessel's path. "He wants us to stop! Well, by God, we won't stop!"

Ensign O'Reilly appeared, pressing a bloody hand to his side. "Captain!" he gasped, leaning against the wheelhouse, "The sight . . . on the gun . . . was all cockeyed, sir! Somebody's . . . bent it . . . out of line. . . . And the machine guns . . . the barrels all blew up. . . . Somebody's . . . somebody's. . . ."

With a thin sigh, he wilted to the deck.

PLOSH! Another shell plunged into the water just ahead of them.

"He's keeping up with us! What's the matter with those fellows in the engine room, Rossi?"

"They say they can't keep pressure, sir.—Some pipes are busted. —Look at all that steam escaping by the funnel!"

The submarine cut toward them on a long diagonal, a bone in her teeth. Soon she was running with them neck and neck, a scant two hundred yards away. An officer in her conning tower waved his arms in threatening admonition and then levelled a megaphone.

"Stop at once, fool!" he bellowed. "Stop! Lower a boat and put Kapitan von Stoeffer aboard us unharmed, or we'll drown every man on the ship!"

"Captain who? What the Hell's he talking about?" barked Elder. "But—okay!" He sprang to the wheel. "Okay! If the swine wants me to put somebody aboard him, I'll put the whole damned ship aboard him! I'll . . ."

"Careful, Captain!" the low voice of Captain Cornelius Eckout came from close behind him. "This —metal object which you feel against your ribs is your own pistol, my dear Captain!"

"Hunh? Why, you—you! . . ."

"Now, don't get excited, Captain—and don't show it if you do! Remember, you and your ship are utterly helpless! Och, utterly! So please ask Mr. Rossi to ring off the engines and. . . ."

Elder's right elbow drove back and caught him in the stomach. He heard a shot and felt something rip through his shoulder. Cadet Parker threw himself upon the German, then fell back coughing with a bullet in his chest. Before the fellow could fire again, Rossi knocked him down, stamped on his hand and broke his jaw with a kick.

With his unwounded arm, Elder spun the wheel full left. From somewhere aft came shouts and the pounding of running feet, but he heard the sounds dimly, if at all. For now, the Merchant Mariner's bow was swinging toward the submarine. Now she was heading straight for it. A shell struck her starboard anchor and drove it back into the chain locker. Through the smoke, Elder could see the Germans standing fear frozen at their gun. The sub swerved. Elder chuckled and shoved down the wheel. The Merchant Mariner's mighty steel snout was aimed directly at the conning tower.

There was a crash, a shock which caused the ship to stagger. For an instant her bow rose, as though she were trying to climb out of water, and from under her forefoot came an agonized, deafening, head-filling crunch. Then, abruptly, she settled down again, like a canoe which had slid over a sunken log. On either side of her, a jagged edged half of the submarine rolled and wallowed soggily, then plunged out of sight in belching, boiling foam. From out of the foam came a foul smell.

Elder rang off the engines and ran to the rail. "Well, well, well, boys!" he yelled at the Germans struggling in the welter of oil and muck. "Don't tell me you've been rammed!—You have? Well, well, well—how do you like it? Fun, eh? Oh, sure it's great, isn't it? Come on, boys—enjoy yourselves! Let's hear you sing! Let's see you wave! Let's see you thumb your noses! Don't you want me to take your picture?"

The Germans were making imploring gestures.

"What's that? Oh, so you don't like it, eh? So, it's different, when you're on the receiving end, is it? Well, just be patient a minute, boys, and we'll drag you out and cheat the fishes! Er-Mr. Rossi!" he turned. "Where's Mr. Rossi?"

"He just left the bridge, sir. He had this fellow's pistol."

"Oh! Well, send the carpenter down into the forepeak, Mr. Blair, to see if she's taking in any water. Then lower a boat and see how many of those rats you can pick up." He stumbled over the Nazi, who was lying on his back, his eyes glassy and his broken jaw jutting sideways. "Oh, pardon me, my dear Herr Kapitan Von What's Your Name! Been seeing any more white rockets, lately?"

Painfully and with great effort, the Nazi spat up at him. The spittle fell back in his own face.

"Ha!" Pleasant specimen, aren't you?" said Elder.

Suddenly his shoulder hurt. It hurt terribly. He saw that the entire right side of his uniform was soaked with blood. He was not quite sure about all that had happened and trying to remember it made his temples throb. He felt dizzy.

He turned to a sailor. "This fellow . . . shot Johnny Parker, too . . . didn't he?" he asked, dully.

"Yes, sir."

"Is Parker hurt bad?"

"Very bad, sir. He shot him through the lungs."

Elder looked down at the battered Nazi. "If I had my gun, I'd . . . I'd ram it down your throat and . . ."

Just then a shot rang out below.

"What's that?"

The sailor moved to the rail and looked down at the well deck. "It's Mr. Rossi, sir. He just bumped off that other German."

"Oh? Good!" Elder swayed against the telephone and grasped it for support. "Please . . . help me . . . to my room."

Radar Credited To 2 Scientists In Naval Radio

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Radar, the secret weapon of World War II, had its inception less than five years after the end of World War I, according to "Radio News," which credited two naval research scientists with the initial discovery of radar's possibilities.

They were Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor and Leo C. Young, who, in 1922, working in the Naval Aircraft Radio Laboratory at Anacosta, Md., observed that ships and other metal objects passing a transmitter and receiver operating at ultra-high frequencies caused a peculiar reaction, the magazine reported.

The two scientists perceived immediately that destroyers situated on a line miles apart could be aware of the passage of an enemy vessel between any two ships in line, despite fog, smoke or darkness.

It was eight years from this primitive beginning that Dr. Taylor, working with L. A. Hyland, noted that an aircraft crossing a line between a transmitter and receiver which were operating directionally gave an interference pattern indicating the aircraft's presence. A year later the radio division of the Bureau of Engineering ordered the laboratory to investigate radio detection of enemy vessels and aircraft.

GETS GREMLIN

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y.—(U.P.)—England's famous "gremlins" have gone west. G. A. Middleton, British cartoonist, has sent an original gremlin drawing to Cooperstown where it will be placed in the gremlin folk-lore collection being assembled by the New York State Historical association.

The Middleton cartoon, however, has a twist not usually found in gremlin drawings. It shows "Pilot" Roosevelt at the controls of a Congressional plane, grinning at four gremlins: Isolationist, Republican, Roosevelt-hater and anti Lend-Lease.

Movement of an armored division and its equipment requires 75 railroad trains of from 28 to 45 cars each.

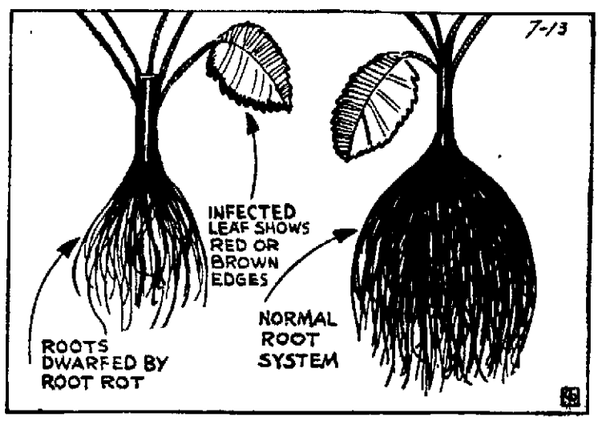
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Guard Against Root Rot of Strawberries In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

As hot, dry weather sets in, check the Victory garden strawberry bed for symptoms of root rot.

Although the foliage symptoms may vary with the variety of the plants, plus environment, the leaves of infected plants are usually edged with red or brown, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Sometimes the leaves become yellowish-green or in the case of the Premier variety the leaves turn a gray-blue color. The leaves of infected plants are smaller in size and fewer in number.

Root rot dwarfs the roots as well as the foliage of strawberries, as illustrated. Upon lifting an infected plant from the soil a dark sunken area may be noticed on or encircling the roots. The outer parts drop off, leaving the central core in long strings which distinguishes it from roots normally darkened by age.

Infected plants fail to produce a normal crop even if they themselves survive. As the strawberry bed is cultivated, watch for and remove any plants which show symptoms of root rot.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

ADVANCED ALLIED BASE, North Africa—(By Wireless)—The first few hours of the invasion were a test of how well the Allied air force had done its work.

Landing on a defended shore is difficult and dangerous but our air cover met with surprisingly little resistance and enemy fighter planes were noticeable by their absence.

Clapper

Allied fliers returning from the first missions after the invasion started reported little or no fighter opposition. This undoubtedly was the result of the heavy air campaign which had been waged against the air fields on Sicily.

The task of the Allied air force is to continue the destruction of Axis air fields, Axis airplanes, to chop up the roads, railroads and other lines of communications to prevent the enemy from moving up forces to concentrate against our troops.

Air strength can dull the edge of any enemy counter-attack but cannot prevent it and the outcome will depend on the ground forces. But in the initial stages of invasion it is the air power that makes it possible to get ashore sufficient forces to establish a beachhead.

The purpose of our sustained bombing campaign against Sicily was to destroy the Axis air forces. Allied attacks have been going on day and night giving the enemy fields no rest, no time to repair runways. Resistance to the Allied attacks became weaker as the fields became unusable.

The Allies have been using all types of planes. Day and night waves of Fortresses, medium Mitchell and Marauder bombers, escorted by P-38 Lightnings swept over the Axis strongholds. The enemy resistance was not broken but it began to get feeble.

The most spectacular fact of the war on this side is the rise in striking power of the Allied air force which insures its supremacy wherever its strength is applied.

The growth of the Allied air forces in North Africa is shown by the fact that in the first 10 days of June more bombs were dropped on Pantelleria than in the entire month of April on all targets in Tunisia, Sicily, Sardinia and Italy.

American air power, in the last few weeks, has begun to flow out in abundant strength all over the place. What the Allied air force did in March in North Africa was increased by some 40 per cent in April and by as much again in May. June shows a continued expansion of bombs dropped.

Of course the task cannot be measured exclusively in terms of bombs dropped. The destruction of enemy planes is the test.

In the Tunisian campaign the Allied air force demonstrated great ability to do that. In the Cape Bon area which includes the numerous fields around Tunis and Bizerte the Allies found after surrender that 650 Axis planes had been destroyed on the ground or abandoned. That does not include losses in combat in the air. The total losses of Axis planes in North Africa since the landings last November run to several times that figure not to mention the losses that Germany is suffering at the hands of Fortresses from England in the air war over northwestern Europe.

Time and Allied production have caught up with Germany. All her thorough advance preparation for air warfare, her secret training of an air force under the guise of glider and sports flying, her unquestioned domination in air strength at the time of Munich have been overtaken by the slow starting Allies.

At Munich Hitler was master because he had his force organized to strike. It has taken almost five years for the Allies to catch up and pass this martial jackrabbit but industrial resources tell in the end in modern war.

The industrial strength of the Allies, now that it is mobilized, is what makes the war news today different than it was a year ago. There is no excuse for our ever losing the initiative again.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—I have some rather simple ideas about the rules of conduct which public men should live up to which, being mine, seem excellent to me. They are not originals but revivals, so to speak, although so long forgotten that they seem new.

I think public men should be honest and should regard public office as a trust, bearing in mind always that if they abuse their position to get rich themselves or enrich their relatives and political supporters at public expense they make the people cynical and thus undermine popular faith in free government. In Chicago, for example, there is a large element of citizens calling themselves Chicagoans who simply will not live within the city limits, preferring the suburbs, because they have come to the conclusion that the city of Chicago is just one great racket. Far from regarding the city hall and the county building as edifices sacred to believers in government of the people, by the people and for the people, they see these buildings as monuments to graft, dishonesty, ignorance and hypocrisy, and unfortunately, they are just about right, for, from the day ground was broken for their foundations their history has been one of defiant exploitation.

Pegler

It is sad that people who should be in there fighting personally, for honesty in elections, for appointments on the basis of ability and character and for a dollar's worth of paving for a dollar instead of 30 cents' worth, have thrown in the sponge and retired to watch the ruin of free government on a limited but important front from a distance which they consider to be safe.

Harold Ickes used to raise a row for decent local government but he, too, moved into an aristocratic suburb before he went to Washington, and my disappointment in him was not a matter of his personality, which certainly is not overwhelmingly endearing, as of civic resentment when he went into a huddle with Ed Kelly, the mayor, and with Frank Hague of Jersey City in 1940, to nominate President Roosevelt for a third term. I knew what he thought of Kelly and his political machine, because Ickes had told me a year or two before when he was monkeying with the idea of returning to Chicago to run for mayor against Kelly as the leader of a reform movement. He said some awful things about Kelly's political outfit, none of them exaggerations, and, of course, everyone knew what the New Deal party line on Hague had been, especially at the time when Hague was running the Communist orators and organizers out of Jersey City.

That makes me believe that Ickes and the whole New Deal, for that matter, because he certainly could personify the New Deal's ethics and principles, were not on the level in their early protestations. I just don't see how a man can have truck with and accept the supporting power of an element which he has denounced as bad, and expect the people to have faith in him.

But I don't mean this to be an essay on Ickes.

The people of Chicago who can afford to go to the suburbs to live can't continue to retreat indefinitely. On a broader scale, the more intelligent and refined people of the whole United States, might be looking about for some place to retire to, outside the country, so to escape unpleasant personal contact with corruption. That being impractical because there is no such place, and for other reasons, they will have to stick it out but it seems to me that in sticking it out they have no living hope of electing a president, a congress and a whole list of governors and mayors who will be completely dedicated to the simple idea of purity in government and implacable enmity toward graft and privilege.

Some politicians, taking what they call a practical view, say it just can't be done, that this ideal simply cannot be realized because a man needs a political organization to get anywhere in public life and political organizations, as we know them, always have a carry-over of crooks and other kinds of bad men who are necessary to turn out the pluralities. Senator Truman of Missouri has been cited. Certain background matters to the contrary notwithstanding, Truman is a pretty good United States senator, and I am told that you have to judge him by his performances in the senate, but I keep on remembering that Tom Pendergast sent him to the senate and can't reconcile myself to a man who knowingly played ball on such a team as the Kansas City machine under such a notorious rogue as Pendergast.

But I believe the people should keep in their hearts a high standard and not be afraid of being called naive and adolescent in insisting that public men attack rascality even in their own parties. If they do this, if they are not ashamed to insist on honesty as the first requirement in a candidate, the ideal will at least be kept alive and there will be hope for the future.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

WPB PREDICTS LEAN CHRISTMAS FOR CIVILIANS

Declares Supplies Will Be 'Dangerously Low' By November.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The war production board's office of civilian requirements believes stocks of civilian supplies will hit a "dangerously low point" by November, it was learned today.

Christmas will be a lean one this year, a high OCR official said, unless steps are taken now to replenish necessary items. He said that retail inventories already are depleted to, and in some instances are below, the danger point.

The civilian requirements division is formulating a program for the manufacture of sufficient quantities of civilian supplies to bring back stocks of needed items closer to normal. It may be ready next month.

The OCR spokesman admitted that the program would run into strong military opposition, but added that the OCR is planning to defend its position—that civilians need certain items to keep up morale and efficiency.

"We are asking for more for the last quarter of this year than is now being manufactured," the official said. "And we are particularly asking that personal items—the perplexing, miserable little things that can upset civilians when missing—be manufactured in quantities that will take care of demand."

For instance, he said, bobby pins, hair pins and safety pins seem like insignificant items. Yet they play an important part in the lives of many and production is to be requested stepped up.

The trend that the OCR hopes to follow will be to get the smaller but necessary things for civilians and cut down on larger items that consume more material. Rationing of some of the larger items, which he declined to name, may be undertaken.

It is possible that there will be a renewal of the manufacture of electric irons—possibly a million of them, and perhaps washing machines.

There is no such thing as a "magic formula" that can be applied to the fixing of civilian economy in wartime, the official said, but the OCR is drawing up a program that should take care of civilian needs without cutting into military demands.

"We are planning as far short of rationing as we can," he declared, "we have no desire to cut civilian goods to 'bedrock'."

END OF BEEF SHORTAGE SEEN

80,000 Head of Cattle Reach Country's 20 Major Livestock Marts.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Improvement in the nation's situation, easing to some extent the beef scarcity to civilians, was foreseen by packing company spokesmen today after the unloading of a heavy volume of cattle at the country's major live stock centers yesterday.

Some 80,000 head of cattle arrived at the country's 20 biggest markets, including the highest run in seven months at the big Chicago yards. Indications were farmers were ready to unload their stock.

They said with cattle moving to the markets, the worst part of the beef shortage may be past and civilian supplies should be considerably greater than in recent weeks. The 80,000 arrivals compared with 62,000 a year ago and 65,000 two years ago.

Most of the cattle were from corn belt feed lots. Many had been held off the market, packers said, in the hope that farmers feeding corn to the stock would receive the increased profit margin they had been demanding.

At Chicago, receipts totaled 18,000, the biggest run for any day since last Nov. 30, the largest run for a July day since 1936, and more than at any other center.

Demand for all classes of cattle was broad at all centers and large eastern buying orders arrived at all important middle west markets.

The increased receipts at the packing centers came only a few days after the war meat board announced it was mapping a program designed to lessen the beef scarcity.

PRICE CONTROL

DENVER—(INS)—Price control has been very effective in Canada. There has been only a slight increase in the cost of living, according to Fred G. McAlister, president of the Kiwanis International.

McAlister, a London, Ont., solicitor who spoke at a Kiwanis banquet in Denver, commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Denver club, said Canada has been hit harder by the war than the United States, "but only because we have been in the war longer."

Persons losing gasoline ration books must report their loss to police 10 days before going to the ration board for replacements, board officials said today. Books can not be replaced unless the loss has been reported, they said. The same ruling applies to stolen books.

Ration board clerks were still puzzled today concerning a call received yesterday from Senator Abe Murdock of Utah or someone who gave his name as such. The telephoner explained he was on his way from Utah to Washington, D. C. and had had trouble with a tire. He then made an appointment to see the board officials about a new tire but he never came. Question in the minds of the clerks today was whether someone was kidding them or whether it was really the senator and he found some other means of getting out of his difficulty. Black market, maybe?

Mansfield civilian defense block leaders are to call on the city's housewives within the next few weeks to sound out sentiment toward the advisability of establishing food canning centers in the city. At the same time they will seek to interest women in joining the WAC during the course of their interviews. Block leaders will get their instructions on both tasks at 9:30 a. m. next Tuesday at John Simpson auditorium, Mrs. John Pierce, war service chairman, said today.

DOUBLE-TIMED

CAMP CAMPBELL, Ky.—(INS)—"All right, now we'll double-time around the block," barked Sgt. Carl Latino, of the 20th Armored Division.

"But, sergeant, I'm—" protested a big 220-pounder standing over to one side.

"No buts. I said double-time!"

The quarter-mile trot ended, the big fellow cornered the sergeant. What I wanted to tell you before we started this double-time business that I don't belong to this outfit. I'm just visiting a friend here."

UMW FACING WIDE PROBE

Investigation of Picketing In Pennsylvania Will Cover Union.

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH—When the federal grand jury reconvenes tomorrow, ostensibly to probe violations of the Smith-Connally anti-strike law by picketing miners, it will actually be initiating the most extensive investigation of UMW activities in the history of the union.

This was the promise today of Charles F. Uhl, United States attorney in charge of the jury, who said a thorough investigation into the background of the labor organization will be made despite the fact a slow back-to-work movement is in progress in turbulent Fayette county, resulting in the reduction in the number of idle soft coal miners to approximately 14,000.

"We are determined to discover the definite causes of the refusal of the men to return to their jobs," he declared. "The FBI is conducting an intensive investigation with this end in view."

Meantime, picketing activities in the struck fields lessened considerably, although it was still rampant in some isolated sections.

Continuing to be hardest hit by the walkout are the "captive" mines owned by the vast steel corporations. Spokesmen for U. S. Steel disclosed that less than one-third of the normal output of bituminous coal was being mined in its Fayette county operations.

REQUESTS NEW BARUCH REPORT UPON RUBBER

Indiana Highway Chief Asserts Washington Bureaus Create Confusion With Actions.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — A civilian highway advisory committee within the fifth service command today considered a demand by Indiana Highway Commission Chairman Samuel C. Hadden for the Baruch committee to make a new report on the nation's rubber situation "to eliminate doubts" among civilians of the need for rationing.

Hadden told delegates to the two-day meeting, one of nine called nationally to discuss military and civilian transportation problems, that conflicting reports on the rubber and gasoline situation had created public doubt of the necessity for rationing.

"One day we read in the newspapers that there will be plenty of synthetic tires for everyone in the near future," Hadden said, "and then the next day we are called to make strict sacrifices if the nation's transport is to be kept moving.

"Currently Secretary of Interior Ickes is making rationing gestures in the direction of the midwest, telling us in effect that we'd better have our fun while we can because it won't last. Yet we have an OPA representative here today who says it's a question of rubber not gas.

"Surely some one knows the answer to these questions. I think it's time for the Baruch committee to make another report on the gasoline and rubber situation to eliminate all doubt in the public mind as to where we really stand on these things."

Ohio Highway Director Hal G. Sours told the committee closer cooperation between the army corps of engineers and the war production board would expedite construction of needed highway projects.

Sours said that in some instances in Ohio projects had been approved as necessary military highways by the army and then rejected by the war production board after the state had spent large sums of money for plans and preliminary engineering.

FORMER MANSFIELDER WEDS COLUMBUS GIRL

Lieut. Curtis Harrison Porter, Jr., Takes Miss Petty Edwyne Stauch As Bride In Church Ceremony.

FRIENDS here of Lieut. Curtis Harrison Porter, jr., son of C. H. Porter, 185 Atcheson avenue, will be interested to learn of his marriage to Miss Betty Edwyne Stauch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Stauch, 3022 Crescent drive, Columbus. The ceremony was performed Sunday in the Geenwood Methodist church, Columbus, by Rev. Joseph Shellhaus.

The bride wore a lovely gown of pale bridal blush tissue satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice, square neckline and long sleeves, ending in points over the hands. The extremely full skirt terminated in a wide circular train.

A tiara of imported orange blossoms held in place the fingertip veil of sheer bridal illusion. Her only jewelry was a locket, which was a gift from her parents. She carried a blush satin prayer book topped with swags of stephanotis and swansonia. Her father gave her in marriage.

The altar was decorated with an arrangement of palms, ferns, summer bouquets and tall seven branch candelabra.

Miss Marianne Davis of Riveredge, N. J. attended the bride as maid of honor. Miss Ellen Wilgus, Miss Bargaret Platt, of Columbus, Miss Patty Deem of Lakewood and Mrs. William L. Burr of Columbus, served as bridesmaids. They wore identical gowns of Madonna blue ninon crepe styled with shirred bodices, lavaher necklines and long full sleeves. The full skirts were worn over taffeta petticoats. In their hair they wore fascinators of blue ninon caught at the shoulder by a jeweled clasp, gifts from the bride.

The maid of honor carried a crescent of blush daisies and the bridesmaids carried similar arrangements of California asters.

John Burroughs of Columbus attended the bridegroom as best man. Seating the guests were Jack Brunson and Ned Will, both of Columbus.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride attended Ohio Wesleyan university, where she was affiliated with the Alpha Chi Omega sorority. She was graduated from Ohio State university in June where she was a member of the Phi Chi Theta and Links.

Lieut. Porter attended Mansfield schools and was graduated from Ohio State university, after which he completed one year of law school. He received his commission from the Ft. Sill, Okla., Officers' Candidate school, July 8.

Miss Neese was presented with a gift of silver, engraved with the sorority's Greek letters.

Those attending the meeting were Mrs. Earl Gaar, Mrs. Alan Dare, Miss Marjorie Bolus, Miss Elsie McConnell, Miss Janet Kelly, Miss Jean Kelly, Miss Connie Baxter, Miss Martha Spetka, Miss Mary Funk, Miss Neese, and the hostess. Miss Bolus and the Misses Kelly were the associate hostesses.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I DO NOT think Ruth Hayes even heard Dicky's taunt about the failure of her revenge. Her every faculty was fixed on the revelation that she had failed to get the key paper to Jack's secret. This I knew when, with a composure that showed her brain was conquering her emotions, she said mockingly:

"I am beginning to find this most interesting! I do not believe I ever have met so fascinating a liar. So I am supposed to have stolen Jack's papers! As I never knew he had any, he could scarcely have told you that."

She stopped a minute, then exclaimed: "But how intriguing! Jack having a tremendous secret, papers in cryptograms, and the key supposed to be stolen! And you say the thief didn't get the key paper? How fortunate for Jack! Of course"—she laughed ironically—"you know I don't believe a word of this rigmarole you're telling me, but do keep on with it. I haven't had such a good belly laugh for a month of Sundays.

"I intend to go on," Dick said, "for I am intrigued too, especially by your references just now to papers in cryptograms. As I did not mention cryptograms, and you say you never knew Jack had any papers, may I be permitted to inquire how you knew that he used cryptograms?"

Her quick wits were ready for that one, and she gave a derisive little laugh before she answered.

"Because Jack Bickett's other name was 'cryptogram'," she said. "In fact, I used to call him 'Cryptogram Jack,' and I helped him try to decipher his old inscriptions. You can bet if Jack had any secret papers, which I doubt, he put them in cryptograms."

"Very ingenious," Dicky commented, "but scarcely convincing. However, we'll let it ride, and I'll go on with my second indictment.

"You see," he went on, "when Jack saw me, he had had no letter from his wife for a long time, although he had written her regularly. As my wife, in her worry over Katherine, had told me this, and also showed me the lying letter you wrote to Katherine, I was able to give him a good picture of what you were up to."

How she managed it, I do not know, for she must have realized her precarious position, but once again Ruth laughed scornfully.

"I'm laying a good bet Jack didn't believe a word of it," she sneered, "and the only reason he didn't knock you down is because he's a chivalrous cuss, and you ingeniously had brought your wife's petticoats down so you could hide behind them."

"You lose your bet," Dicky returned blithely, ignoring the taunt. "He believed every word of it, fitted it in with the lies you had tried to tell him of Katherine's association with Hal Meredith, and the opinion of you he expressed to me couldn't be printed. 'Pole cat' was one of the more refined epithets he applied to you, and in his fury he let drop things which if he had been calm, he never would have uttered, because Jack Bickett is chivalry itself."

He paused, to let his words take full effect.

"From his ravings," he resumed presently, "I gathered that you must have launched a pretty determined campaign in his direction, literally thrown yourself at his head, as the saying is, and that he finally had to tell you in so many words that there was nothing doing, and that he must insist that you leave him alone.

"So, you see," Dicky finished. "Jack is fully wise to you, and I think if he ever set eyes on you again, he'd have to be restrained by force from doing violence to you. So there's really no use in your making these frantic attempts to find out where he is. He wouldn't see you, even if I broke down and told you his whereabouts."

I could see that her impotent fury was choking her, and my fear for Dicky brought my silencer pistol into my hand as I saw the quick movement of her right hand to the pocket of her coat.

But quick as she was, Dicky was quicker.

With a cat-like spring, he seized her arm with one hand, and plunging his other into her coat pocket, brought out her hidden revolver.

Then, to my utter astonishment, he called out:

"Come out, Madge, and frisk this wildcat for me."

HOROSCOPE

A day of the most expansive and encouraging auspices is indicated by the benefic aspects of powerful planets, both by lunar and mutual configurations. It should be a time for attacking cherished hopes and wishes, aiming at the highest of goals in business, career, domestic, social and affectional relations, with every prospect of success, happiness and enduring fortune and good will. While luck may prove to be a factor in this benign estate, yet practical foundations, hard work and sense of duty and obligation, sustain endeavors in which friends and these in high position are ready to recognize merit. But there may be some sort of sudden upheaval or uprooting, with change from original plans and aspirations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of splendid expansion of their cherished plans, purposes and ideals, with many benign and heart-warming fulfilments of long-hoped-for objectives. Hard work, fidelity, merit and practical constructive ability may attract the substantial support, of friends, elders, superiors and those in authority. It is a goal to be confidently aimed at, with social and professional rewards as well as domestic and romantic happiness added incentives to determined effort. However, be prepared for a sudden reversal of plan and purposes, which may involve new pastures or the relinquishment of familiar ties. All should bring pleasure and outstanding progress and prosperity, of enduring worth and enjoyment.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Al Fendrick's recent resignation as coach of Madison high school athletic teams, after 14 years of service on Ram Hill, reminds me that we've never had Madison's football schedule for next fall.

Believing that Al would know something about the subject in spite of the fact that he is no longer concerned with the ramifications of the Rams, I put the question to him: "How come we haven't had that football schedule?"

"The reason you have not had the schedule before," explains Al, "is because it wasn't ready before. We had a hard time getting a schedule together, and it was completed just recently."

Now this is as good a reason as any, and better than some, so the powers that be at Madison may be excused for failing to acquaint the populace with what goes on.

Fortunately Al had a copy of the schedule with him, and here it is:

Sept. 17—at New London.
Sept. 24—Open.
Oct. 1—at Orrville.
Oct. 8—Dennison.
Oct. 15—at Loudonville.
Oct. 22—Galion.
Oct. 29—Bellville.
Nov. 5—Crestline.

That isn't such a bad schedule, three road games and four at home, although it might be better from the crowd standpoint if a few of the games came early in the season.

Still all outdoor sport promotions are a gamble with the weather, and you never can tell, maybe there'll be better weather for the latter part of the season than early, although the calendar is against it.

As for it being a tough schedule, it looks fairly representative of teams in Madison's class and slightly better, outside of the Class A game with Galion.

"It's been my experience in 20 years of coaching," says Fendrick, "that when a Class A school wants a game with a Class B team, the A school has a good team. They don't like to take a chance on being beaten by a B outfit."

"I wouldn't want to put the hex on whoever takes the Madison job but I'd say the Rams this fall have a good chance of winning every game but the Galion tilt, and their chances of beating Galion depend on the mental attitude with which they face that game," continued Fendrick.

"The Rams this fall should have a great backfield with Bader and Anthony back, and Eccles coming up from the reserve team. In fact it looks like a good team all the way through, with the big problem coming at center. Three boys are out for the center job, and I had counted on that competition to give me at least one good center.

"It looks to me like the coach will have to start building morale for the Galion game as early as the trip to Orrville. It will be a tough trick, beating Orrville, Dennison and Loudonville, with the Galion game always in mind."

Lippy Leo Has Two Strikes

Branch Rickey Doctors Ball For Big Pitch.

By JOHN CASHMAN

NEW YORK—(INS)—Leo Durocher, Brooklyn Dodgers' manager whob egan the 1943 season wth two strikes against him, is today eyeing the pitcher who might soon fan him—Bums' Boss Branch Rickey.

After the hot, babbling reaction to his alleged statements causing suspension of Pitcher Bobo Newsom and open revolt of Infielder Arky Vaughan, Durocher is now going through the darkest hour of his brilliant and tempestuous career. The spark Leo applied to the Dodgers, which propelled that club to its greatest heights in 20 years, is growing less bright with the passing of each day that sees him a shaky, uncertann manager, and the man who holds a managerial pardon or death sentence for Leo is Rickey.

And this, by every indication in the books, makes it appear as if Leo is through in Brooklyn.

Leo, in the first place, never had a vote to full confidence from Rickey until his last-minute resigning as Brooklyn manager. The Dorgers' spring training camp buzzed with the rumors of various gentlemen who were supposed to succeed Durocher. The only semblance of order in the rumors revolved about the fact that everyone agreed that no more than one man should succeed Durocher. Rickey did nothing to dispel the darkness in which Leo's position was shrouded. He just sat back and waited.

Those who said Leo was through might have had something. They might have been remembering the time when, right after signing his 5-year contract as Brooklyn president, Rickey indicated it would be better if the Bums got rid of their the Dodgers' desperate loss to the more aged veterans. In discussing said: "The rapidity of the decline St. Louis Cardinals in 1942, Rickey made it evident tht age had begun to claim its toll. It's a mistake to hold men too long a bigger mistake indeed than to sell them too soon!"

Did you heer that Mr. Fan? That was strike one on Durocher.

When Durocher was finally signed after rejection by the army, he put his name to a contract that gave Rickey the right to dismiss him on ten days' notice.

Did you hear that, Mr. Fan? That was strike two.

The indication that strike three might not be long in coming is seen in the way Babe Dahlgren was sent from the Dodgers to the Philadelphia Phillies. Babe is nobody's slob as a ball player. He is, at present, busting up ball games to the satisfaction of Owner Cox. What he is doing for th Phillies, he could have been doing for the Dodgers . . But Rickey didn't want him.

Dahlgren was just as sorely needed by the Dodgers then as he is now, but needed or not, Rickey got rid of him. If Rickey will deal off an active young ball player of Dahlgren's calibre, will Branch hesitate to dispense with Durocher, a manager who has apparently lost the confidence of his club?

Westies Take Series Opener

Four Home Runs Seen In Game With Stars.

Harry Ross may be getting old and his arm may be gone, but he can still hit. He collected three safe blows in four times at bat including a home run but his Jones and Beeber All-Star teammates were unable to follow his example Sunday and dropped a 17-5 decision to Westinghouse softballers in the first of a three-game series.

* * *

Stub Winebrenner held the rest of the All-Stars to four hits and Westies won the game with 10 runs in the first three innings.

* * *

Woerth got three for four including a homer for Westies while Bride and Vogel hit for the circuit for the Stars.

The series is being sponsored by Glenn Channell of Corner Lunch who has promised the two teams a party when it's all over.

Westies play tonight at Ashlan and tomorrow night at Galion.

Strain Tells In AA Race

Indianapolis Falls Back To Tie Brewers.

(By Associated Press)

The strain in the closely-laced American Association pennant race is finally beginning to tell, judging by the way Indianapolis beat itself last night to fall back into a tie with Milwaukee for the lead.

Minneapolis knocked off the Tribe 7 to 5 by scoring a pair of runs in the 10th inning when Right Fielder Willard Pike dropepd Frank Trechock's fly. The error blew the Indians' chance of widening their lead since the Brewers' doubleheader at Toledo was postponed.

The up-and-coming Louisville Colonels moved within one game of overtaking St. Paul in sixth place by beating the Saints 4 to 1 behind Lefty Vic Johnson's four-hitter.

Consolidating their hold on third place, the Columbus Redbirds completed a clean sweep of their three-game series with the Kansas City Blues with a final 2-1 decision. Lefty Dockins collected his seventh victory after besting Don Hendrickson in a hurling duel.

Emil Verban, with 3-for-3, was the vital factor in the Flock's offensive. His single in the fifth set up a run and another safety in the seventh drove in the deciding marker after the Blues' Roy Zimmerman had doubled to score George Schmees and tie the score in the sixth.

Haegg Agrees to Enter Mile Race

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—Softened up by hours of argument and a filet mignon that represented a week's rationing in his own country, Gunder Haegg, the Swedish running machine, promised today he will run the mile Saturday in San Francisco against American ace Gil Dodds.

Besides running against Dodds, Haegg will also be out to smash the mark of 4:02.6 set recently by his countryman, Arne Andersson, who lopped two seconds off Haegg's own time in setting a new world's record.

Andersson's record was established soon after Haegg arrived in the United States, and the Swedish wonder announced that he would have another go at the mark in San Francisco.

Mort Cooper Picked As National Hurler

McCarthy Expected to Start Bonham or Hughson In Star Tilt

By JACK CUDDY

PHILADELPHIA—(UP)—Baseball's mid-summer classic, the annual all-star game between picked performers of the National and American leagues, will be staged in Philadelphia for the first time tonight with big Mort Cooper again opening on the mound for the Nationals.

Though many luminaries who shone brilliantly during the 10 previous "dream games" are now in service, the rival squads are so evenly matched with those remaining that a capacity crowd of 33,000 is expected to Shibe park when Cooper attempts to avenge last year's defeat.

Cooper, brawny, black-haired right-hander of the St. Louis Cardinals, was starting pitcher for the Nationals at New York last July when first-inning home runs by Lou Boudreau and Rudy York resulted in a 3-1 American league victory.

Billy Southworth of the champion Cardinals, manager of the 1943 National squad, announced Cooper as his choice to open the first all-star night game in which the National leaguers seek to improve their records of three victories against seven defeats. Betting is at even-money on the outcome.

Joe McCarthy of the Yanks, pilot of the junior circuit squad, was unable—as yet—to announce his starting moundsman, but his choice also was expected to be a right-hander — either big Ernie Bonham of the Yanks or Tex Hughson of the Red Sox. McCarthy, who arrived late yesterday, said he must go into a huddle with his seven flingers before announcing his starter. He wasn't certain about Bonham, who had complained of a knee ailment while the Yanks were in Chicago.

Southworth announced the starting National line-up that would take the field if McCarthy opened with a right-hander. McCarthy drew up a vague batting order in which only five men definitely were slated to perform.

Each pitcher can hurl only three innings. Thus, McCarthy is expected to use two right-handers and sandwich a southpaw between them—probably Hal Newhouser of the Tigers.

Southworth's National league pitching was weakened when Southpaw Howie Pollet of the Cards departed yesterday to report at St. Louis for an army examination. Ace Adams of the Giants, originally the squad's batting practice pitcher, was designated to fill Pollet's vacancy. Southworth probably will use Mort Cooper and Pittsburgh's Rip Sewell, both righthanders, and Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer of the Reds.

Receipts of the game, expected to approximate $75,000, will go to the bat and ball fund which provides servicemen with baseball equipment. Play opens at 8.45 p. m. (EWT).

American Troops Take Licata at Cost of Four Dead

CAPTURE 300 PRISONERS IN SWIFT ACTION

Enemy Planes Cause Little Trouble as Landing Goes Like Clockwork.

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Representing Combined U. S. Press

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—American forces landed and captured the Sicilian town of Licata with more than 300 prisoners at a cost of four dead, Herbert White, American photographer operating for the wartime photographic pool, reported.

"Boy! Our American warships were crackerjacks—they knocked out every pillbox ashore!" the grizzled unshaven cameraman exclaimed as he came back tired but happy to an African port.

White, whose home is in Washington, D. C., brought back the first pictures received at African headquarters of American troops invading Sicily.

"The infantry landing craft started for the beach at about 2:45 a. m. and our navy poured it on each pillbox that tried to get tough," he said. "I would see a flash from a shore gun and immediately naval shells would start whistling over my head and smash the enemy into silence.

"Enemy bombers came over in the darkness, dropping flares before they let go with bombs, but they didn't hit a thing.

"After daylight I went ashore to see the equipment unloaded from my landing ship and it was a pretty exhibition of efficiency to see loads of artillery and vehicles and supplies moving from sea to land like an assembly line in a Detroit factory.

"The skipper of my ship, Lieut. H. R. Fleck of New York City, is a World War veteran and dean of the skippers of this kind of vessel. He made the causeway to shore with a pontoon and our tanks and other things rolled into Sicily ready for action.

"No enemy planes bothered us from dawn until about 1 p. m. when three bombers came over and did a very poor job. They missed with everything they dropped.

"Licata is built on a rolling hill to our flank and our infantry went into it in a jiffy. A battery or two in town and a railroad battery behind a hill finally decided to do a little fighting, so our warships cracked down again. They plastered those Italians and that was that.

"On the beach military police kept everybody stepping towards noon when there was a report that the enemy inland might be preparing to counterattack. But it hadn't developed by the time I left at 3 p. m.

"All our dead were gathered on the beach—two soldiers and two sailors. And we had practically no wounded.

"Our first ship carried a doctor and eight medical attendants expecting we would have to bring back considerable wounded, but as it turned out we did not bring back even one.

"The Italian soldiers that were rounded up sat rather glumly on the hillside watching the American army whiz past them to the European second front. There must have been from 300 to 350 Italians in that batch of prisoners."

City Playground Attendance for Last Week 1,011

Attendance at the city parks summer playground programs last week was 1,011, slightly below the figure for the previous week, Recreation Director Al Fendrick reported today.

Fendrick also announced point winners at Prospect and Johns parks. Arthur Bosh placed first in the boys' contest at Johns, with Jack Long second and Gust Angelus third. Sarah Bosh took first honors in the girls' contest at Johns, and Christine Swartz and Corrine Gerhart placed second and third, respectively.

PROSECUTION ON PLANE FLAWS WAITS EVIDENCE

Justice Department Seeks Additional Data Before Taking Criminal Action.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Whether criminal prosecutions will be warranted in connection with alleged sale of defective equipment to the government by the Wright Aeronautical corporation, a Curtiss-Wright corporation subsidiary, appeared today to depend on additional evidence being turned over to the justice department by the senate Truman committee.

It was learned that justice department officials are not satisfied thus far that available evidence warrants criminal proceedings.

In addition to material already turned over by the Truman committee, the justice department, through the FBI and its War Frauds unit, has itself been investigating alleged irregularities at the firm's Lockland, O., plant, for nearly two months.

Although Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, in a formal statement, said army investigation confirmed a greater part of the information furnished by the Truman committee, he emphasized that in no instance had it been found that defective engines were placed in service. The committee had reported that engines from the plant had caused airplane crashes.

Patterson's statement disclosed that the army's resident representative at the Lockland plant had been removed because of the committee's disclosures. Likewise the officer in charge of the inspection section at the Wright Field headquarters of Air Forces Procurement. Additionally, the army inspection personnel was increased substantially, and the time for engine test runs at Lockland lengthened.

Strengthening reports that no crime had been uncovered thus far was the justice department's official statement that "if the department's investigation develops information warranting prosecution, the information will be presented to a federal grand jury."

Meantime, the Truman committee disclosures revived interest in a bill introduced by Sen. Sam Hobbs, D., Ala., earlier this year which would impose penalties of death, life imprisonment, or a $1,000,000 fine on officers of firms delivering defective equipment to the armed forces.

The bill has never been reported to the house by the judiciary committee. A subcommittee held hearings with justice department officials among those testifying and the original bill was materially revised by that group.

Hobbs said today he believed publication of the charges against the Curtiss Wright subsidiary "and other disclosures of that type which are certain to come to light" will rally support for his bill and result in prompt consideration by the house when congress reconvenes in September.

Hobbs added, however, that his bill was not designed to prosecute any one company or its officers.

FDR Hope for End Of Coffee, Sugar Ration Still Hope

WASHINGTON —(INS)— President Roosevelt's recent hint that elimination of coffee and sugar rationing could be hoped for has, so far, developed into nothing more than that—something to hope for.

Although the war food administration wants to lift rationing of the two commodities as soon as possible and is reported to have the plan definitely under consideration, the actual "go" signal would have to come from the war shipping administration and that agency is said to believe it "best not to release rationing."

Coffee stocks on hand are "sufficient" according to both WFA and WSA, to support a virtually normal distribution, but the shipping agency "will not guarantee" continued good shipping from Central and South America, on which the whole idea hinges.

BACKS PLAN FOR NIGHT SHOPPING

CIO and AFL Joint Committee Adds Support To Request By CIO Council.

Further support of the Richland County CIO council's request that business places remain open one night each week to allow war workers time to transact their business came from the joint CIO and AFL public affairs committee today.

Philip Schwaner, chairman of the committee, said the committee was "wholly in support of the program adopted by the CIO in regard to keeping stores, banks and doctors' offices open."

In making the request to the Mansfield Retail Merchants' association, the council pointed out that much time was being lost in war industries because workers had to take time off to shop and transact business. The association authorized Merle Pecht, president, ot appoint a committee, representing the various branches of retailing, to study the proposal.

Pecht said this morning that members of the committee had checked with several local factories to determine the possible benefits of the proposal.

He said other Ohio cities, whose business places remain open one night each week, had been checked and that these cities reported favorably on the plan.

ICKES ORDERS COAL DIVERTED

Sends 22,500 Tons Daily To Strike-Crippled Steel Plants.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes, exercising his wartime authority to keep vital plants in production, today ordered 13 Appalachian field producers to divert daily 22,500 tons of special purpose metallurgical coals to strike-starved steel plants ordinarily served by western Pennsylvania mines.

The emergency shipments, which will continue for six days, will entail the diversion of 135,000 tons of special purpose coals from plants that have adequate stocks or can use other types.

Plants aided by the diversion include Republic Steel company, Weirton Steel company, Jones and Laughlin Steel company, and the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation of the U. S. Steel corporation.

The emergency shipments are "expected to return all of the steel plants to full production with the exception of the huge Clairton plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation," according to an announcement by Ickes.

A further effort is being made to obtain sufficient coal to return this plant to maximum production, the announcement said.

Explaining his action, Ickes said, "the industries from whom this coal is being diverted may be able to continue operations without it for the time being, but even so, they can ill afford to lose this coal.

"We must restore normal distribution at the earliest possible time. This, of course, cannot be done until normal production is restored," he added.

BEGIN TO CONTACT GROCERIES, EATING PLACES ON OPA PRICES

Four price assistants recently appointed by Chairman Charles C. Beelman of the county war price and ration board, will begin this week to contact eating and drinking establishments, groceries and meat markets in the city.

Mrs. N. C. Yarger, Mrs. David Boals, Mrs. Otis Williams, Mrs. J. F. Daily, the assistants, will aid in getting information from the Office of Price Administration to the retailers, answer questions, receive complaints, and do what they can to assist the retailers in complying with price regulations, Beelman said.

Meanwhile today the ration board was busy answering questions concerning the new War Ration Book No. 3.

Beelman said today that the books as they are mailed from Columbus have only the name of the owner at the top. The remainder of the information is to be filled in on the receipt of the book, and should not be brought to the ration board for completion.

Persons who have not yet received their books were asked by Beelman to be patient for all books will be in the mail by July 21. The board chairman said persons who had not received the number of books applied for should send the stub which was returned with the books to the mailing center in Columbus.

NEW HANGAR TO GO UP AT CITY AIRPORT SOON

Building To Be Largest of All Built So Far; Estimate Cost at $10,000.

Construction of another new hangar, the third to be built in the past two years, is expected to get under way at municipal airport within the next two weeks it was announced today by James R. Harrington, president of Harrington Air Service, Inc.

The building will be the largest of any yet constructed at the port, Harrington said. Estimated to cost $10,000, the structure will be 100 feet square.

City council will receive a request within the next few days for permission to build the hangar south of the roadside park along state route 13.

Harrington explained that the hangar would have to be constructed on the south or west side of the port since the north side of the field is completely taken up with present structures.

He added it was doubtful if the additional hangar would provide enough space to take care of all the planes the government has assigned here for its War Training service program.

Thirty ships have already been sent here and the number is expected to be boosted to 50 within the next few weeks. In addition there are some 30 other planes hangared at the field.

If you ever need $25, $50, $100 or more quickly and simply, come to Household Finance. If you have a job so that you can repay in small monthly payments, you are welcome to apply for any amount up to $1000. The sooner you repay the less your loan costs. Example: A $50 loan repaid in 6 monthly installments of $9.24 each costs $5.44—if repaid in one month the cost is only $1.50. No endorsers or guarantors are ever needed. We never make inquiries of friends or relatives.

Zadok Dumkopf says he can read a good book and listen to the radio at the same time. It's merely, he points out, a case of mind over chatter.

Power Companies Show Boost In Operating Revenue of $130,000,000.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Selective advancing tendencies persisted in today's early stock market transactions.

Up fractions to a point or so were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors and International Harvester.

On the side of power and light company issues was the survey of the Securities and Exchange commission estimating all of the operating concerns in this industry having assets of $5,000,000 or more enjoyed an increase of better than $130,000,000 in total operating revenues in 1942 over the preceding year.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Wheat and rye futures opened fractionally higher today on buying by houses with southwestern connections, but oats lost minor fractions.

Wheat started unchaned to ⅝ cent higher than Monday's close. September $1.46½, December $1.47¼-⅜, and rye was unchanged to ¼ up, July $1.13⅛.

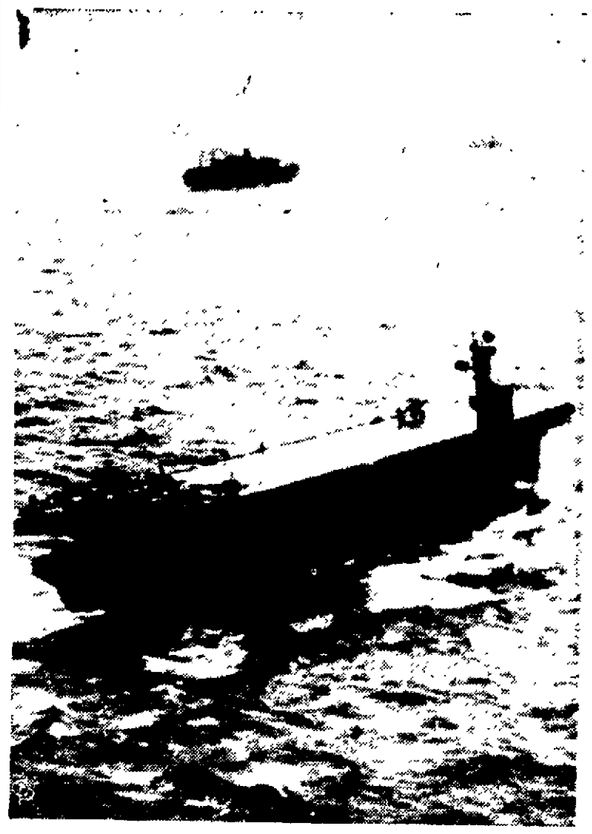
Baby Flat-Top In Attu Drive



Here's a baby flat-top, an escort carrier built on the hull of a merchant ship, that played a vital part in driving the Japs from Attu in the Aleutians. The tiny carrier's planes supplemented those that took off from Amchitka island. Official U S Navy photo.

Predicts Women To Coach High School Sports

LAKE SEBAGO, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Women high school athletic directors for at least the duration of the war is predicted by Dr. Jay B. Nash, chairman of the department of physical education and health at New York university.

He said girls would supervise such men's sports as wrestling, soccer, lacrosse, cross-country running and even football. A spokesman at the N. Y. U. Lake Sebago Camp where 70 women student physical education students have been undergoing practical athletic training since last month, emphasized that football coaching may be handled actually by "a male English teacher" supervised by the female director.

One town, Bridgehampton, N. Y., has already hired a girl for the town's high school, Lydia Lindgren of (13 Old Mill Road) Baldwin, N. Y. She'll start work in the fall with general supervisory over athletics at the school.

ALLIES SEIZE TWO IMPORTANT SICILIAN TOWNS

Take Augusta, Ragusa, Push Toward Catania; Turin Bombed By RAF.

and "no enemy counter-attack with tanks has successfully been beaten off and a large number of prisoners taken and some tanks destroyed."

Veteran British troops advancing along the east coast "encountered some resistance," the bulletin said, but "inland very good progress has been made."

The communique disclosed that a mammoth fleet of more than 3,000 shipping vessels of all types from merchantmen to warships is helping in the invasion and landing of supplies and reinforcements.

It acknowledged some bombing of shipping by Axis planes, and the German communique declared "heavy losses" had been inflicted.

Overall, the battle was going well, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower made a personal visit to this new scene of Allied triumph.

The British pushing up from Syracuse were thrusting deeper one blade of a huge Allied scissors opening to cut off Sicily. The other blade was the American troops in the south.

These two great land thrusts were accompanied by continuing powerhouse blows of the Allied air force over Sicily, and big four-engined American and British bombers teamed for heavy blows yesterday and last night upon southern and northern Italian cities to tear new wounds in that besieged land.

American Liberators flying from Middle East bases struck railroad yards and ferry slips at Reggio Calabria on the Italian toe to disrupt reinforcements for Sicily, and Britain-based RAF aircraft rained block-buster bombs upon the armament city of Turin last night.

The Italians reported furious battles raging in southern Sicily as the Allies sought to widen their footholds and join forces. Up to yesterday, the Allies reported capture of 6,000 Axis prisoners.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., is commanding U. S. troops in the south, his new American Seventh army including some veterans of the U. S. Second Army corps that fought in Tunisia. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery directs the eastern coastal drive, his force numbering some units of his deadly, efficient Eighth army, plus Canadian troops.

Overhead in Sicily, Allied bombers and fighters continued to slash at Axis ground troops and materiel, hitting large numbers of vehicles, sinking two enemy transports and firing two destroyers en route to the island, Allied headquarters reported. Two troop transports were believed hit. "Heavy and concentrated" raids were made on airfields to keep the enemy from the skies.

A Cairo communique said the Liberator bombers started fires in Reggio Calabria, and other bombers struck San Giovanni to the north, pounding ferry slips. In all, 100 Liberators tossed more than 650,000 pounds of bombs on the two targets. Messina, in Sicily just across the narrow strait, also was heavily punished yesterday.

The RAF flying a 2,000-mile round trip poured "the usual heavy concentration of bombs" upon war industries in Turin, and the attack was "part of the combined operations now going on in the Mediterranean." London announced. Rome said 101 persons were killed and 203 injured. Thirteen British planes were lost.

Fleets of Allied planes struck at Europe by daylight today, continuing the war on German objectives, but there was no immediate announcement on these raids. German raiders hit a British northeast coast town, identified by Berlin as Grimsby, causing numerous casualties and damaging scores of buildings.

Division Cripples Hitler's Luftwaffe

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—What's wrong with the Luftwaffe?

Merely a matter of mathematics—a case of dividing a given force between a growing number of fronts, says Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the American Army Air Forces.

"Why is it (the Luftwaffe) not nearly so strong today?" the general echoed a newsman's question in an interview yesterday. "Well, take any number and divide it again and again, to care for all your increasing combat fronts, and you have decreasing air power at one front. It's mathematics."

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—Firm confidence in ultimate Allied victory was voiced by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a special statement today.

"In the great task that still lies ahead," he said, "I feel confident because of what has happened in the last few days. The sun of victory, I believe, has risen over the horizon."

GUN STABILIZER HELPS WIN 'E'

Westinghouse Device Improving Tank Fire Part of Basis For Award Tomorrow.

"We believe this to be the first attempt at borrowing from the construction of warships for the construction of arms for warfare on land."

The Westinghouse engineer who invented the gun stabilizer received a special medal from President Roosevelt a few months ago at the White House.

Col. Reedall said that Westinghouse now manufactures thousands of these stabilizers and added:

"Military secrecy makes it impossible even now to disclose the complete story of the workings of this device, but it can be said that the gun stabilizer greatly improves the accuracy of gun fire from a tank moving over rough terrain."

Col. Reedall will be presented at the "E" presentation ceremonies tomorrow by Lieut. Col. T. H. Eickhoff.

The "E" will be the third to be received by a Mansfield plant. First to receive the award was the Hughes-Keenan plant on May 7. Next was the Tappan Stove company which received its award on June 16.

The "E" ceremonies start at 10:30 a. m. with an inspection of the plant by military men, newspaper and magazine writers and other guests. They will see the production of army binoculars, armor-piercing shot, military communications equipment and airplane parts.

The presentation program opens at 2 p. m. at the plant's parking lot. Wayne and East Fourth streets.

J. H. Ashbaugh, manager of the Westinghouse Appliance division, will introduce the master-of-ceremonies, Milton Cross, announcer for the National Broadcasting company.

Major John J. Price, post chaplain at Fort Hayes, Columbus, will offer the invocation.

Presentation of the award will be made by Major General Thomas J. Hanley, Maxwell Field, Ala. Son of T. J. Hanley of Mansfield, he is commanding general of the southeast training command of the Army Air Forces.

Gen. Hanley will present the "E" banner to C. L. VanDerau, works manager, and James Anderson, vice president of Local 711, UERMWA.

A group of five Westinghouse employes whose service records total more than 100 years will receive their "E" pins from Commander W. P. Bacon, senior assistant to the inspector of naval materiel of the Cleveland district.

The employe group will represent all fellow employes. During the pin presentation, other employes will open envelopes containing their "E" pins and will pin them on themselves.

Benediction will be pronounced by Major Price and the program will close with the playing of the national anthem by the Local 711 band.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, and George H. Bucher, president, will be among Westinghouse executives attending the ceremonies.

As Derailed Cars Hit Underpass Near City

This photograph shows four of the five cars of a Baltimore and Ohio work train which were derailed yesterday, piling into the overpass on Park avenue west at the city limits. The other car which was equipped with a huge crane was under the bridge. Cause of the accident which tore up about 100 feet of trackage was not immediately determined. The force of the impact moved the entire bridge but state highway officials said today that preliminary surveys failed to disclose any serious damage.

loss of the cruiser U.S.S. Helena was acknowleged. Available reports on the second battle mentioned no United States losses.

Today's action-packed account from General MacArthur showed Japan everywhere losing the fight for Munda. In the air above it and in the seas offshore.

Ten miles northeast of it, a Japanese ground force of considerable strength was trapped and wiped out. Munda has been cut off from its supply port on the Kula gulf by a barricade bristling with guns thrown across the connecting jungle track. East of it, American jungle fighters are less than two miles away.

Offshore, United States warships for the second time in less than a week pumped shells under cover of darkness on Munda, an air base whose seizure would put American invasion forces within fighter plane range of Rabaul.

Following this shelling planes added their bombloads to the 189 tons dropped on Munda the three previous days.

Twenty Japanese Zeros came over Munda and were driven off with a loss of five against one of ours. Across from Munda on Rendova island, six United States planes were lost while a Japanese bomber, two Zeros and a twin-engined fighter were being shot down.

Over Rabaul, an air and shipping fortress of the enemy which may be the ultimate objective of the present Pacific drive of the Allies in the Solomons and New Guinea, American Liberators cruised for nearly three hours in the latest night raid, dropping more than 25 tons.

Yanks Tighten Kiska Blockade

WASHINGTON—(INS)—American sea and air forces today tightened the blockade around Kiska in the Aleutians as U. S. warships continued to pulverize enemy installations, possibly in preparation for a death blow.

Success of the blockade was indicated by the navy announcement that American planes on July 10 intercepted four Japanese cargo ships southwest of Attu, sinking one and leaving the other three battered by bombs.

The fact that the Japs dared to sneak cargo ships into American controlled waters was interpreted by some naval observers as a sign that the enemy may be badly in need of some types of supplies on Kiska.

from 14 to 17, were put on probation to their parents for 60 days and ordered to report to the juvenile court every month for a year by Judge Cramer. They were also prohibited from driving an automobile after 9 p. m. unless accompanied by their parents and were ordered to be home at 10:30 each night for the next 60 days unless accompanied by their parents.

One of the boys who gave his home address as Cambridge and said he was visiting in Mansfield will be sent home as soon as his parents can be contacted. The court will contact juvenile authorities there who will keep him on probation, Ralph Carroll, juvenile officer, said.

Russell E. Moore, 19, arrested Saturday night at Main and Sixth streets with two boys, 13 and 16, was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail and costs by Judge Cramer after he pleaded guilty to charges of contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Moore admitted buying a bottle of wine which he gave the boys. Having given their home addresses as Epworth the two boys were ordered by the court to stay out of Mansfield after 9 p. m. unless accompanied by their parents.

Fire Guards Are Seen as Curb on U. S. Fire Losses

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The new civilian defense fire guard unit is viewed not merely as bolstering of our preparations against air attack but also as an important force in reducing fire losses throughout the country, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3rd, chief of the Protective Branch of the OCD, stated at a recent conference attended by regional and state civilian defense and protection officers, held here for the purpose of clarifying local adaptation of the fire guard program.

The new fire guard unit is a first line of defense against incendiary bombing, but whether or not air raids come, the fire guard should be helpful in combating increase fire losses in this country, General Grant stated. He emphasized that such losses are particularly serious now because destroyed plants, goods and machinery are irreplaceable and a total loss until the end of the war.

Percy Bugbee, managing director of the National Fire Protection association, welcomed the formation of the fire guards as a means of curbing fire losses. He pointed out that there had been as many large industrial fires up to the present time this year as there were during all of 1942. He warned also that we may be faced with widespread sabotage fires.

anese naval base at Paramushiru in the Kuriles had been bombed by American planes from Attu. "There is nothing I can talk about," he replied.

He added that he would not "deny or affirm" the rumors which were heard here yesterday.

The secretary said that he was "amazed at the civilian morale in the northwest."

"In Seattle I attended an Independence day parade which was the biggest I've seen in this war," he reported.

The secretary said that he was "very much gratified with the navy's part in the Sicilian campaign." He added that no American navy ship losses had been reported thus far in the invasion.

Knox also said that it was impossible for him to reveal yet whether the American naval forces suffered any losses in the latest battle of Kula Gulf in the Solomons.

The secretary said that the navy did not have any contracts with the Wright Aeronautical corporation at Lockland, O., where, according to the Truman committee, defective airplane engines were produced.

He added, however, that "we've been watching the situation for months."

Wants 16 Million More Acres Under Cultivation Next Year.

carrying out conservation programs and thus reach and maintain maximum productivity from their land. The WFA said considerably more machinery and larger supplies of fertilizer will be available next year.

Jones also announced that cotton marketing quotas will not be in effect for the 1944 crop. He listed quota restrictions for this year last week after the agriculture department reported 21,995,000 acres in cultivation on July 1 —a reduction of nearly 1,500,000 acres from last year.

On a basis of prospective food requirements, Jones said, it now appears likely that an increase of 30 to 40 per cent of this year will be needed for dry beans and peas, 20 to 25 more peanuts and 15 to 20 per cent more soy beans. Continued high acreage will be needed for flax seed, Irish and sweet potatoes and certain other vegetables.

He indicated that corn and alfalfa hay should be increased substantially to enable livestock producers to maintain as many cattle, hogs, sheep and chickens as possible.

The present outlook on feed indicates that a substantial reduction in livestock numbers will be necessary during the next 12 months. Jones estimated that the total slaughter of meat during the next 12 months will average about 50 per cent more than for the years 1936 through 1940. The number of cattle in the United States is at an all time peak of about 80,000,000 head.

Farmers will be urged to produce as much milk, eggs and meat as possible from the feed supplies that this country will be able to grow or import.

Pork output for the next 12 months, he said, is likely to be 65 per cent above the 1936-1940 level, beef and veal 38 per cent and lamb and mutton slightly higher than those years. The 1944 livestock program will be developed in line with the feed yields from 1943 crops, Jones said.

and cargo planes—in Mansfield. The grant is contingent on the city's acquisition of the necessary land.

On the basis of preliminary surveys made several months ago by district CAA engineers, it is estimated that the city will have to acquire approximately 1,000 acres. City officials have estimated that the cost involved will total around $100,000.

After the CAA has determined the site, city council will be asked to allocate city funds for purchase of the land which, it is understood, would be acquired through condemnation proceedings.

CAA engineers have looked over two sites in northern Richland county, one including properties north and west of the present airport and the other northwest of the port about a third of the way to Shelby.

Work on the project, the government has said, is scheduled to get under way late this year or early in 1944.

NAZIS SHIFT WEIGHT SOUTH

Throw Full Strength Against Belgorod Wedge, Abandon Northern Sector.

The tremendous success of the Red armies was indicated by an announcement today that the Germans have "despaired" of breaking through the Orel-Kursk sector, after suffering immense losses in one of the most determined attacks they have launched since the nine-day offensive started.

Today, the Russians said, German forces on this sector have been considerably reduced in size and are being used merely to consolidate their present positions.

While the Russian midnight communique reported that German attacks were somewhat weaker in the northern area around Orel, the Soviet army newspaper Red Star said the struggle around Belgorod was daily becoming "more acute," with the Nazis hurling wave after wave of 60-ton tanks into the fray in an attempt to widen a wedge they drove into the defenses last week.

A few details are now trickling through about the fighting of the past few days around Belgorod. After breaking through into Russian positions, Von Kluge's columns attempted to exploit the wedge by launching numerous attacks in different directions, front line dispatches said.

When these failed the Nazis were reported to have buttressed their own lines under cover of darkness, quickly erecting defenses and tank barriers to forestall a Russian flank attack. The German column then turned north and attempted a break-through on a narrow sector but were again repulsed, the dispatches said.

The fighting, Red Star said, gained the German forces nothing and resulted only in further heavy losses of manpower and heavy equipment as the defending Soviet forces poured a hail of artillery fire and hand grenades at the advancing tanks.

MUSIC MAY BE LATE BUT YANKS STILL GO FOR IT

American Tunes Go Over Big In Australia But Jap Zero Hour Falls on Face.

By ART COHN
INS War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA,—DEAR BOSS The ASCAP boys will be delighted to learn that it's a photo-finish between Elmer's Tune and White Christmas for the No. 1 position in the current hit parade down here.

My Devotion is running a strong third, San Antonio Rose is a length behind and Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree is making its move.

Australia, I fear, will never be the same It will recover from the ravages of war but the influence of Tin Pan Alley is something else again. All Australia is singing our songs and her women have learned to jitterbug to our music

"I still can't believe it," the proprietor of a small music shop in Cairns was telling me the other day. "Before the Yanks came over, I thought I was taking a big risk buying three copies of a new American song hit And I was too, often I was stuck with two of them Now I buy 300 copies of every American song published and I'd buy more but I can't get them

"Maria Elena just about broke all the records but White Christmas will probably set a new one. You see, we're about a year behind the United States in popular songs because it takes that long for most of the motion pictures to be shown"

Australian song writers are almost non-existent There is no money in it over here and consequently no encouragement The only Australian song that even pretends to compete with American hits is a thing called "Waltzing Matilda"

The best music on the radio is, of course, recordings of American broadcasts And they're timely too A couple of weeks ago we were treated to a special program by Fred Waring All Yuletide songs At the end Fred wished us a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Speaking of radio, I should mention the zero hour

That is Tokyo's serenade to American soldiers It comes over daily at 7 p m It is intended to demoralize our boys and succeeds almost as effectively as a speech by Mussolini

The announcer is a Japanese-style Lord HawIHaw who speaks impeccable English and puts on a spiel something like this

"Good evening, Americans . . . our first selection tonight will be that beautiful song 'You Were Never Lovelier' Reminds you of your sweetheart back home, doesn't it? How would you like to be dancing with her tonight?

"But you aren't sucker, she's dancing all right . . . with someone else Listen, 'You Were Never Lovelier'"

Or something like this

"The next piece boys, will be 'Dearly Beloved' But before I put it on, I'll get a little snack from the icebox Let's see what we have here . . . Ah yes, some sliced turkey lettuce tomatoes pickles . . . you called em Dagwood sandwiches back home remember? Or did you have enough bully beef for dinner?

And that is where the Japanese mind fails It is incapable of understanding the psychology of an American. There may be ways of demoralizing him but that is not one of them. It accomplishes exactly the opposite result The Jap Haw-Haw doesn't make the Americans sad, he makes them laugh.

And how they roar at him talk back to him call him names I would give much to repeat

There is the difference between Americans and everyone else The European would take that broadcast seriously Hitler and his gang know that That is why the people are forbidden from listening to English or American broadcasts

But the American cannot take propaganda seriously It's just a joke to him We as a people have little respect for anyone

That is why the Zero hour is so unsuccessfully popular Americans can not conceive of a Jap teaching them how to think and what to think So they ridicule his efforts But they still listen to the music That's made in the U S A

East could have made sure of his contract by trying for his third-round heart trick before starting the cross-ruff After taking the second trick with the diamond A, he should have led a second round heart at once and then, no matter what card was returned, should have taken his heart trick as soon as he was back in the lead He could have felt safe about this, as North was almost surely marked with three or four hearts from his play of the 2 on the opening trick With only two hearts North would doubtless have started an echo with a higher card

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1943.

Another 'E' Comes To Mansfield

WESTINGHOUSE, largest of Mansfield industries, will be next to receive the Army-Navy "E" award, with impressive ceremonies scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.

Here again is evidenced the fact that industrial excellence is not governed by number of employes but by the accord which exists between employes and management and in the willingness of each to do a fair share of the work required to make all parts of a large organization function efficiently.

As is proper, it is to the thousands of men and women employed in the Mansfield Westinghouse plant that chief credit goes for making it possible to qualify for this recognition of faithful and efficient service to their country in time of war.

Creditable industrial operation is as impossible without the interested and competent workmanship of employes in all departments as it would be without the capability in management, supervision and financial direction which provides opportunity for employment.

It seems worthy of note that this new honor comes to the men and women of Westinghouse in the year that marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of that company's start of operations in Mansfield, and this may also be made an opportunity for community thought on the large part which this company has played in local industrial development during the past quarter century.

As the passing years strengthen friendships among individuals they also establish closer bonds between a city and its industries, and long before now Westinghouse, and each of its employes, has come to be regarded as a vital part of this community and depended upon to take an important part in all civic activities.

It is in this spirit of friendliness and mutual interest that all of Mansfield shares in the feeling of pride with which each man and woman of Westinghouse will receive an "E" pin tomorrow—in recognition of the nation's appreciation of valuable aid in the war effort.

Allies Show Mounting Strength

EVER SINCE those frightful days at Dunkerque, in late May 1939, when the miracle of evacuating a third of a million British soldiers across the channel was accomplished, Great Britain has been preparing to repay, with interest, that blow to pride and prestige.

That was a time when no nation, nor group of nations, was ready for the tremendous military onslaught for which Adolf Hitler and his magnificent war machine had been preparing for a decade.

What might have happened had Hitler followed the Dunkerque debacle by an immediate invasion move across the English channel, need not now be dwelt upon, nor need time be given to considering the possible outcome had the Nazi dictator decided against his over-ambitious dream of conquering Russia within a month after his hordes were unleashed on that country in June 1941.

Not until the Pearl Harbor attack by Japan, in December 1941, did the United States arouse to the magnitude of the Axis conspiracy to seize world domination, and it has really been since then that the United Nations have been showing ability to develop the military might necessary to crush the Axis.

Despite handicaps and difficulties of internal origin, United States production capacity, manpower and financial resources have been brought to the point of creditable participation in the Allied war effort.

Successful co-operation with the British in North Africa, increasing strength in the Battle of the Pacific, a fine share in the invasion of Sicily and growing aid to Russia and China—all of these evidence the large part that this country is being called upon to play in the march toward victory.

They also tend to emphasize the great importance of not permitting anything to stand in the way of all-out effort to end the war in Europe this year—if possible—and the war against Japan in 1944—if it can be done.

Matter of Community Concern

LET'S NOT have any appearance of discord among city and county officials or courts in the matter of what's being done, or should be done, to correct local conditions which are contributing causes of more juvenile delinquency than might be expected in a community which prides itself on being "a good place in which to rear children."

Let's assume that city officials, each member of the police department, the county juvenile court, all character-building social agencies, and all law-abiding citizens are seriously concerned about the present situation and willing to do everything possible to improve it.

This condition is not peculiar to Mansfield, as similar juvenile unruliness has been experienced in many other cities, so the problem is general rather than local.

Loose handling of the liquor business in Ohio, coupled with the fallacy of designating 3.2 beer as non-intoxicating, has opened the way for spread of drinking habits among minors and the arrest of a number of boys in the lower teen ages on intoxication charges serves to enlighten many people who have thought that "such things can't happen here."

Nothing much can be expected of spasmodic activity along this line, but something worthwhile can be accomplished if it is approached as a long-range project, with investigation, study, planning and determination to provide wholesome environment, supervision and entertainment for those of the city's children who lack these advantages.

That Low-Flying Plane

THE INCIDENT of the low-flying plane over Mansfield early Sunday evening is the sort of thing that seems unimportant UNTIL SOMETHING HAPPENS—after which prompt action is taken to prevent recurrence.

Not often, of course, does a plane crash into a city street or onto a home—but occurrences of this kind have been frequent enough to show that such a thing can happen and to indicate that needless flying over populated areas had best be avoided, especially such a stunt as was pulled by the pilot who seemed close to raking housetops Sunday evening.

We have an idea there's a regulation that forbids that sort of smart aleckism—if there isn't there should be.

Under the new regime, puns are banned on radio programs in Argentina—so, after all, something seems to have been accomplished by the recent revolution.

Rail-Plane Monoplies Opposed

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Railroad and steamship companies already are anticipatorially jealous of aviation's post-war prospects.

Congress already has a watchful eye upon surface transportation's suspected plan to scoop in the air, too, as soon as it ceases to be monopolized by military requirements.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D.) Montana discussed the matter in the upper congressional chamber the other day, serving notice that he will introduce legislation presently prohibiting rail and water-borne services from mixing their respective stock-ownerships with overhead flights.

The Montana solon also aims at keeping bus and truck activities in a separate classification from those of other terrestrial movement facilities, either ashore or afloat.

The theory seems to be that an earthly-acquatic-aerial combination would be a dangerous kind of a trust. Senator Wheeler proposes to head it off in advance. Aviation is still so young that it probably did not occur to the Montanan to deny its managements the right to acquire rail, highway and waterlevel stocks, as well as to protect them from competition up into the skies. However, doubtless they will come next, as they develop heavenly greed.

Then it will become a triangular scrap—rail, steamship and airplane, as well as busses and trucks, if they are to be included.

Senator Bennet Champ Clark (D.) of Missouri warmly indorsed Senator Wheeler's proposition. He did not mention lowly busses and trucks, but he did say that land, sea and air are three distinct elements, which ought to be kept apart, having no business with one another.

* * *

FROM a new world standpoint, the Wheeler-Clark view has especial significance.

We North Americans are pretty well provided with railroads, trucks and busses at home. Latin-Americans are, unhappily, far from as fortunate.

Which suggests the thought that if a New World union is established it ought to be based on aviation.

Here in the United States, we developed railroads when they still were vitally essential. I myself almost can remember covered-wagon days. As we settled our land, though (mighty rapidly; not gradually), we soon recognized the necessity for faster transportation and travel. That set our railroads a-going. In their day they kept up with what we considered our demands in that era.

Only lately aviation began to break into the situation. It has to hustle to keep up with requirements. Still, the rails serve their purpose superficially.

However, while all this was going on, our southern neighbors were not getting anywhere.

For productive purposes they had as good possibilities as our own, but they could not move their products. They were all right close to their seaports, at which our oceanic shipping could reach them, but they could not get their supplies from inland, down to water level.

It just kept them back to the primitive stage, throughout their whole continent.

Now, we need their raw materials and we need it processed, but we cannot get it, because they cannot deliver it at the water's edge—no inland activity to forward it.

And it will take a generation to get it going along terra firma.

Railroads are slow building. It is like getting back to the covered-wagon period.

But trans-American aviation can expedite it.

We Yankees want those supplies and the Latins want our markets to assimilate them.

Answer? Aviation—and in a hurry! The war has us tied up momentarily, but a bit later the sky will be truly the limit!

WELL there was a picture of three paratroopers in the papers . . . three of the first to land on Sicily . . . and one was named Leginski and one was named Ferrari and one was named Driscoll.

* *

And there is the story of America in three names . . . Leginski, Ferrari and Driscoll.

They aren't names you'd recognize from the passenger list of the Mayflower. Their people came later.

* * *

Maybe they arrived on one of those gray mornings when the fog and mist hung over the lower bay and the new world looked strange and dismal and forbidding.

Maybe they were a little frightened and a little heartsick as they stood there at the rail . . . silent . . . and troubled.

* * *

Maybe then they saw her facing out to sea, her torch held high. Maybe they heard her words . . . "Give me your tired, poor . . . your huddled masses yearning to be free. Send these, the homeless tempest-tossed to me. I left my lamp beside the golden door."

* * *

Maybe then they nodded to each other . . . and smiled . . . and said "This is it . . . this is America."

* * *

And maybe they looked up to her and whispered "Thanks . . . thanks for your welcome . . . we won't forget."

* *

And so a Leginski, a Ferrari and a Driscoll were among the first to land on the island of Sicily as the battle of fortress Europe opened.

* * *

A Leginski, a Ferrari and a Driscoll committee to the task of keeping lighted forever the "lamp beside the golden door."

* * *

Thought for the day: Not buildings, not money, not land . . . but the Leginskis, the Ferraris and the Driscolls . . . this is America.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Moon May Be Next

THE SLOPE and burned-over woods now grows abundant pasture. Blue grass, tender and nourishing, is between spaces of large green trees. Farther down, for many years, an abundant variety of palatable beggarweed has come up, and patches of lepsedesa. This beggarweed is a fine leguminous plant with protein qualities, like clover or alfalfa. I have watched it spread for four summers. During late summer it bears a saw-tooth group of pods, each holding a single seed. When these were large and still green, I opened some and found they tasted like soybeans.

With the lowland planted in growing crops, our two cows, Betsy and Mrs. Bones—and Bawl-Baby Beef, Betsy's calf—have run me ragged. By diligent search, I found six spools of barb wire that could be bought, and brought it home. Delegating the two smaller boys as cowboys to watch the bovine marrons and guide them away from our gardens, the two older boys and I went into the jungle and blazed a trail.

Yes, literally a jungle trail, uphill through sinewy greenbrier, bitter sweet and tenacious skeins of wild grape. Intermingled were blackberry brambles and tough second growth of elm, maple, sassafras and oak. The days were hot—not a breath of moving air could find us. For one whole day, after the trail was made, we stretched barb wire—two strands along the northern hilltop border of the farm.

After this we started on the south, by devious ways skirting the young peach orchard, and fencing the cattle out. One cool morning, I grew quite ambitious and dug a line of deep postholes along the bank to my neighbor's border. We strung two wires, and I erected bars.

I let the bars down, and with confidence, we drove the Jerseys up into the pasture. Bawl Baby, as is usual during the day, was licking up calf meal in a box stall. My wife and I went to the village grocery, and left the boys at home. It was after we had gone that Bawl Baby began to tune up,—practicing all the vocal effects known to calfdom. . . .

When we came around the curve of our gravel road, an hour later there was Betsy munching juicy soybeans in the middle of the back field—and Bones had neatly gone down a double row of growing corn, not missing a thing.

"Betsy knelt down and slid," said the round-eyed five-year-old, pointing to a streak upon the bank where something had roller-coasted. "Aunt Bones followed right on her tail. Then they got up and shook themselves and put up their tails and ran. They looked funny. Like the cow in the picture book that jumped over the moon."

Dave Boone Says:

ANOTHER really big American who never got much of the spotlight died the other day. He was Clifford W. Beers, who devoted almost his entire life to crusading for better treatment of the mentally afflicted. What a dramatic story his life makes. In the movies you'd call it far-fetched.

* * *

Cliff Beers, a kid just out of Yale, had a mental breakdown. He was put into an asylum. Although his mind cleared, he had the usual difficulty making others believe it. His shocking plight inspired him to a crusade. He feigned violence and fought his way into straitjackets and padded cells. He experienced all the stupidities and brutalities of the day. And then he wrote a book, "The Mind That Found Itself."

* * *

This book went into 26 editions and into all languages. It started reforms which Mr. Beers kept battling for by founding the American Foundation For Mental Hygiene. He never stopped fighting for a more humane approach to mental cases.

* * *

To Cliff Beers, dead at 67 after a 40-year battle, millions of people unfortunate enough to suffer mental trouble, owe kind treatment, sympathetic handling and complete recovery.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

President's Spur-of-Moment Idea Puts Strain on Textile Industry

WASHINGTON—When you see how navy brass-hats get completely off base on a simple matter like uniforms, you can get a better insight into why the navy has been so inexcusably slow in building escort vessels, using helicopters, and adopting auxiliary airplane carriers.

The inside story on the navy's new uniforms becomes more amazing as more leaks out.

It is now revealed that last fall when the subject of new summer uniforms was debated, procurement officials warned that new uniforms would strain the textile industry, so they wanted notice well in advance.

Finally, in December, procurement officials got a promise that there would be no new summer uniforms, but that the old khaki jobs could last another year, even if they did wrinkle at the shoulders and bag a bit at the knee.

Knox Said No.

JUST to make absolutely sure they would not be called upon to dig up several million yards of textiles at the last minute, procurement officials actually got a written commitment from no less than the secretary of the navy himself, Frank Knox, stating that there would be no change in uniforms.

But Knox did not count upon his clothes-horse commander of the fleet, Admiral Ernest King. The admiral came back from London wearing a green uniform nattily got up for him by a London tailor who caters to His Majesty's navy. It is the privilege of the commander of the fleet to wear any kind of uniform he wants, and King had let His Majesty's tailor use his imagination.

Overruling Knox.

WHEN the admiral walked into the White House, the president complimented him on his dashing new get-up, and suggested on the spur of the moment that the navy adopt a similar uniform.

"I wish you'd tell that to Knox," said King.

Whereupon the president proceeded to authorize Admiral King to go over the head of the secretary of the navy and order new summer uniforms for the entire navy.

This little act in itself will put such a strain on the textile industry that the rest of the United States may have to be clothes-rationed.

Sea Tests.

HOWEVER, this wasn't all. The natty green uniform of Admiral King, inspired in London, had to be taken out to sea on a battleship and subjected to camouflage tests to ascertain whether the enemy could see it. This required a lot of time and monkeying around. And finally slate gray was substituted for green.

Then the clothes-horse admiral and his sartorial cohorts conceived the bright idea of saving gold braid by having the stripes on an officer's sleeve run only half way around, instead of all the way around.

Accordingly such an order was issued. Only then did the sartorial admirals discover that to change these stripes would take exactly 275,000 tailor man hours!

And tailors these days are harder to get than textiles.

Note: Worst result of the new uniform is the fact that it makes for economic discrimination in the navy. The wealthy young officer can afford the new slate gray uniform and will buy one immediately, presumably winning favor with "Old Clothes-Horse."

But the officer who has to support a wife and family on a meager naval salary can't afford the extra $100, so he will have to keep on wearing his old khakis, which he can do under regulations until they are worn out.

Hershey and WACs.

NOT FAR from the Potomac river in Washington, two apartment buildings have been converted to war purposes. The Potomac Park apartments serve as headquarters for Selective Service, while the building next door serves as headquarters and dormitory for the WACS.

In their various duties, the WACS work three eight-hour shifts, with the result that almost any hour of the day might be bedtime for one shift or another.

It so happens that the WACS dormitory is located on the eighth floor of their building. Major General Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, is also located on the eighth floor of his building across the street.

One day the general beheld an unexpected sight out of the corner of his eye. His mouth opened.

"Now I understand!" he cried. "Now I know why those young officers downstairs come up to the eighth floor so often!"

* * *

Dirk for President.

ILLINOIS Republican Representative Everett Dirksen, sometimes called "Thorn-in-FDR's-side," is taking seriously the talk of friends that he run for president of the United States.

It all began when Dirksen attended an alumni meeting at the University of Minnesota, his alma mater, where the old grads started organizing Dirksen-for-President clubs. Now the distillery interests in Peoria, Ill., near where he lives, have taken it up and 25 congressional colleagues will soon come out for "Dirk for President."

His most powerful backstage pusher is Earle Smith of the Illinois Farm Bureau, whose congressional spokesman he has been for many years.

Note — Dirksen voted against the anti-strike bill because he said it was not fair to penalize all of labor because of John L. Lewis.

Merry-Go-Round.

THANKS to Admiral "Clothes Horse" King, a naval aviator now has to worry about five different kinds of uniforms. He must have white, blue, green, the new slate gray, and he already has the old khaki uniform . . . Mrs. Cordell Hull believes in going to bat for her home town. When she heard the army was putting up a hospital in Staunton, Va., she insisted that it be built of brick, even though all bids were in on the usual frame hospital buildings. The army yielded . . . Later Mrs. Hull demanded that the brick buildings be ornamented with white pillars and other colonial trimmings. Again the contract was changed. Mrs. Hull got her wish . . . Other towns which got frame army buildings are now wishing that the wife of the secretary of state had spent her girlhood with them . . . Senator Cabot Lodge, Republican, of Massachusetts, will cover the round-the-world trip of the five investigating senators for the Associated Press.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Don't you realize that the more money I get out of circulation the less chance there'll be of having inflation."

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

Ernie Does Some Talking About Himself And Finds the Subject Interesting.

Editor's Note: Ernie Pyle has notified us from Africa that he will not send any dispatches for a few days. Meantime a friend has forwarded a clipping of a story Ernie wrote for the Stars and Stripes, Army newspaper, published in Africa and elsewhere. Excerpts from that article follow:

SO THE STARS AND STRIPES wants some of us correspondents to write some pieces for you guys to read. The idea, I think, is for us to write about you.

Well, I don't know why we should be telling you about yourselves. If you don't know where you're at and how you feel by this time, you must be too dumb to read anyhow. So for lack of a better subject, I'll break all the rules and write about myself.

I've been away from home for a whole year now. Practically all that time has been spent nosing around odd corners of the earth with you GI's, looking in vain for colleens in Ireland, trying to keep dry in England and "allez-ing" the poor Arabs to death here.

I've traveled 20,000 miles in Africa, got myself shot at once or twice, and died a thousand deaths from freezing. I know three generals by their first names, and have almost been court-martialed once. I've stolen one jeep and had two stolen from me.

* * *

SINCE leaving home I've sent back nearly 300,000 words about you and your current careers, to coin a phrase. You didn't suspect you were that interesting, did you? Well, maybe you aren't, but brother I've got a living to make.

In my rambles through Darkest Africa I've come to know hundreds of you by name and a good many thousands of you by sight. So far I've always got along fine with you and you've all been nice to me.

At the moment I'm in a tent camp on the beach, kind of half-working and half-shirking, waiting for the next cue. Even a correspondent imagines he needs a rest after a thing like Tunisia.

Out here it's practically the same as being at Miami. Our cabana has running water (when you tip up a five-gallon can the water runs out.)

We have, clean linen on our beds (at least I suppose we do—it was clean the last time I looked inside my bedroll last November.)

We have electric lights and my boudoir lamp that hangs from the ridge-pole is shaded by a delicate cardboard cover off a White Horse whisky bottle. The covering, I regret to say, was empty when it came into my life. If I ever see a bottle of White Horse I'm not going to drink it, I'm going to eat it, glass and all.)

We have Mediterranean surf, blue skies, land terrapin, Spam, and a full society life (every morning three little boys chase a herd of goats through my tent.)

It's truly a wonderful vacation, easily afforded by any vacationer who is willing to let the government foot most of the bill. Of course I have to pay a little extra for the ants that keep crawling up my legs, but hell, you can't get ants like these at Miami Beach for any price.

* * *

IN MY TRAVELS around the djebels and wadis with you soldiers, there are three main questions you always ask me. These questions are:

1. When will the war be over?
2. When are we going home?
3. When and where will the next move be?

Being a correspondent, I'm blessed with a sixth wisdom, and of course I always have a great deal of inside information. So here are my answers, for what they are worth:

1. I don't know.
2. Je ne sais pas.
3. Ich weiss nicht.

I really don't know and except for No. 3, of course, I don't think anybody else does either. But if you want my railbird opinion—I wouldn't make dates to meet anybody at the corner of Main and Vine for at least two years yet if I were you. I know that crack will make me very unpopular with you, but what the hell, at least the Arabs love me.

* * *

AND SPEAKING of this going-home business, I think the main difference along that line between you soldiers and us correspondents is psychological. We know we can go home, therefore we don't mind staying. You know you can't go home, consequently you think about it all the time.

One night I got to talking with some soldiers about this and we arrived at the conclusion:

If you were all suddenly put in the same position we are, that is if you were suddenly offered the chance of going home for good—I don't mean a few select ones to be used for training. I mean everybody just up and quit and go home merely because you want to go home—I'll bet not one in 100 of you would vote to go until the war is won.
